Online Talk with Andrew Black and Keir Milburn

Andrew Black and Keir Milburn will speak about the film called 'On Clogger Lane' by Andrew Black. The film is also a part of the exhibition at LUX in Waterlow Park.

This talk will take place online. After the talk, they will take questions from the audience.

This event is free but you have to sign up. You will receive a zoom link to join this online talk a few days before the event.

This event will have a live captioning by 121 Captions and a BSL interpretation by Altan Maidrig.

We will show the film 'On Clogger Lane' online for a week. From Wednesday 21 February to Wednesday 28 February.

About the film:

The film title is 'On Clogger Lane'. The film travels through the Washburn Valley near Otley and Harrogate, which is overlooked by a large satellite observation station and hidden under reservoirs. The film looks at how money affects the land and includes stories about witches and people from the past. In the film, Andrew talks with local women who fought against the Royal Air Force Menwith Hill site. As well as other people who share evidence about industry, history, and stories in the Washburn Valley, showing various layers of what people have done.

About the speakers:

Andrew Black was born in Leeds and has lived in Glasgow since the year 2009. He's been part of different art projects, like the Experimental Film & Moving Image Residency at Cove Park. Recently, he worked with Atlas Arts and exhibited at Centre Clark in Montreal. Andrew Black received the Margaret Tait Award 2021 for his contributions to experimental film and moving image art. The Margaret Tait Award is a LUX Scotland project with Glasgow Film, supported by The National Lottery through Creative Scotland.

Keir Milburn's recent book Generation Left inspired debates in many countries on the generational divide in politics. He co-hosts the popular #ACFM podcast on Novara Media. This podcast is about the connection between between music, the weird, left-wing politics, and collective joy. As a member of the Red Plenty Games Collective he also makes political strategy games. He is co-director of Abundance, which designs Public-Common Partnerships. Public-Common Partnerships is a different way of owning assets.

Watching the work before the event

We encourage you to watch the film 'On Clogger Lane' before joining the event. Your thoughts and participation is very important in this event. The film is showing at LUX in Waterlow Park. The film will also be available to watch online from 21 to 28 February on the LUX website.

Participating in the Event

We encourage you to turn your camera on during the event, if you are comfortable. This creates a feeling of being together. We will record the event and share it online later.

All participants need to be respectful to each other and listen to the facilitators and other participants.

Audiences are encouraged to share what they think when the host opens up the group conversation. We ask that one person speaks at a time. When you want to speak, type 'hi' in the chat. The facilitator will call your name. You can use the chat box to type your question or comment too. Keep your microphones on mute until you are going to speak.

Online Etiquette

We want to make a welcoming online environment for everyone, regardless of gender identity and expression, age, sexual orientation, disability, physical appearance, body size, race, ethnicity, religion or belief. If anyone is not respectful to the speakers and other participants we will ask that person to leave.
